Academy Mission Statement

A conference on educational innovation for nurse faculty and healthcare educators in hospitals, long-term care, and public health settings.

Academy Objectives

1. Examine critical trends in technology and evidence-based teaching in the education of nursing students and interdisciplinary healthcare teams.
2. Describe effective strategies for the use of high- and low-fidelity simulation in clinical, classroom, and community settings.
3. Integrate best practice for nurse educators teaching in the clinical environment.
4. Explore opportunities for implementing landmark policy statements into nursing educational processes and outcomes.

Welcome To The Midwest Nurse Educators Academy!

Keynote Information:

Keynote I: Pamela Jeffries, CNS, RN, FAAN, ANEF, is an associate dean for academic affairs at John Hopkins University School of Nursing. She has an international reputation for developing, testing, and implementing innovative products to enhance the learning of students.

Keynote II: Daniel Raemer, PhD, of Harvard University, is a renowned expert in simulation as an innovative teaching method. His background is in bioengineering and anesthesia.

Keynote III: Tamika Auguste, MD, is an obstetrician and gynecologist at Washington Hospital Center. She is committed to improving the safety of patients. She is also the physician representative to the Perinatal Patient Safety Project (PPSP) and coordinator of the Obstetrics Simulation Lab.

Keynote IV: Susan Luparell, PhD, APRN, BC, is a nationally recognized presenter and accomplished author on Dealing with challenging student situations and addressing student incivility in nursing education. She is an assistant professor of nursing at Montana State University.

Keynote V: Tim Bristol, PhD, RN, CNE, is an educator and consultant for private and public institutions which specialize in faculty training and clinical educational technology.

Keynote VI: Mike Schlappi, MBA, is a gold medalist and author. His thought-provoking keynote presentation challenges individuals of all ages that despite difficult circumstances, you can take response-ability and be empowered.
